Commenting on her decision to take on the role of Ambassador at CfC St. Moritz 2022, Doris Fiala said: "The developments in the digital assets, crypto and blockchain space in recent years have been very significant. Governments around the world can no longer ignore the implications of this – it's time to accept that crypto assets are here to stay. Here in Switzerland, we have formed a parliamentary group on this very issue, with the aim of informing and educating both parliamentarians and the business community on the topic. My decision to come onboard as an Ambassador at CfC St. Moritz was an easy one to make. Hosted in Switzerland, it is one of the most important conferences worldwide for the digital assets industry. I am happy to contribute to CfC St. Moritz as it strives to become the bridge between the traditional worlds of finance and government and the new world of digital assets.”

Kevin O’Leary, Chair of O’Shares Investments, said: “This year marked a major turning point for the digital assets sector, as it was further legitimized and folded into the world’s financial markets. In the coming year, we’re expecting to see further mainstream adoption of crypto assets and decentralized finance. In advance of that, we need to be prepared for both the challenges and the triumphs – and there is no better way to kick the year off than to be surrounded by the industry’s finest leaders at CfC St. Moritz. I’m not just looking forward to this upcoming event, but I am proud to be playing a part in a conference that will well and truly shape the future of the crypto assets industry.”

Following two sold-out virtual events in 2021, the CfC’s in-person event will prioritize the health and safety of attendees. All attendees and participants must show proof of vaccination against COVID-19, recent recovery from COVID-19, or a negative COVID-19 test result to gain access to the conference location.
